

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

To God be the Glory! First and foremost, all thanks to the Almighty God who gave me the strength to undertake this project and continues to protect me every day. The path to the completion of this work has been long and convoluted. During the research and writing, many individuals and institutions have given much needed assistance and encouragement. Credit must go to Jackie Grobler who supervised and directed my doctoral studies with great skill and enthusiasm and has also been a supportive friend. His critical reading of the text provided rich insights, and thanks is given for his unfailing support at all stages of the study. Professor Ray Silverman of the University of Michigan (UM), Ann Arbor, who provided valuable mentorship and guidance during the nascent stage of the work and encouraged my inquiry into American commemorative history for comparative purposes. Professor Robert Franz provided wise counsel and material on the early relationship between the Boers and the indigenous Africans of the Transvaal in the late 1830s and early 1840s as he continued to take an interest in my research.

I am grateful to UM, Ann Arbor, for the African Presidential Scholarship Award that made this study possible. The African Studies Centre (ASC) International Institute under the directorship of Professor Kelly Askew provided a much needed six months scholarship (February to July) to the UM, Ann Arbor, in 2009 during which I was exposed to rich material on commemoration and construction of collective memories. The ASC further arranged that I continued to receive much needed material until February 2014. Kate Christlieb of the interlibrary loan section at Hatcher Library of the UM played a crucial role in ensuring that I received the material that I needed. Thank you also to the University of Pretoria (UP) for the initial sponsorship that kick-started research on this project. In the same vein, my thanks go to Ms Alett Nell, the History Librarian in the UP Merensky Library for her consistent assistance. At the University of Leiden, my gratitude goes to Ms Mieneke van der Salm of the Social Sciences Library.

I owe special thanks to the families of sculptors Harry Johnson and the late Phil Minnaar for their support and generosity. Harry Johnson shared remembrances of his youth and mother. The Johnson family welcomed my wife and I to their farm and studio in Groblersdal in the Sekhukhune District of Limpopo where they hosted us for two days. Harry not only invited me to his studio, but he also exposed me to some of his primary operations that also informed this study. Both his wife and son shared the family story that chronicled the history of the sculptor's career with us during a braai one evening. Phil Minnaar and his wife also welcomed me to their studio in Garsfontein, Pretoria East. The Minnaars also shared not only a family scrapbook that articulated the history of Phil's career, but their friendship as well.

I would also like to thank the officials of the Department of Sports, Arts and Culture in Limpopo province namely Mishack Mulaudzi, Donald Lithole, Gezani Mabunda, and Derik de Wet, all of whom were working in the heritage unit of the department and were involved with the Warrior Traditional Leaders' project. The study would not have been a success without their input. Their interviews have enriched this study much more than I could have initially imagined. To the former Premier of the Limpopo province Mr Sello Moloto, thank you for your selflessness and the time you made for me during your hectic schedule. "Your complementary gift of your speeches continues to be most valuable gift I have ever received from anyone, God bless you." I wish to also thank Daniel Koma at the Mogalakwena Municipal Offices in Mokopane, Waterberg District for making the much-needed material on Kgoši Mokopane available at a time when I was beginning to get desperate.

The following friends and colleagues have all provided support one way or the other: Gloria Molaba nee Thoka, Mabatane 'Blitcher' Kgaphola (may his soul rest in peace); William Maepa; my brother Pudiyamako; Dr Fanki Monama; Seane Mabitsela; Kholisile Nzolo; Reinette Stander; and Corry Masilela for their unflinching support.

Finally, special thanks go to my wife Pebetse and children namely, Ngoatladi, Ngoatshipa, Pheladi, and Monare, whose constant support has gone beyond the call of wife and children. This piece of work is dedicated to you guys and my late parents, MONARE LE NGOATLADI, "ROBALANG KA KHUTŠO DITHAMAGA".
